US companies are involved in manufacturing, distribution, construction, and providing professional services throughout the world. At the same time, much of what we use in our daily lives is imported into this country. The globalization of our economy has raised new challenges for the Safety, Health and Environmental professional. It is no longer practical to have separate SH&E programs for domestic and foreign operations. The speakers in this conference will provide insight into various aspects of their operations and programs that have been developed to meet global SH&E needs.
